Coming off a win at the NAHBBS party opener, Super Relax Concept has issued a rigorous challenge to the enemy camps of Belgie Hup United, the uber-Teutonic Grundelbruisers and perhaps the most dangerously sponsored team in the Portland metro area, Team Beer.

Dismissing a simple bike race as “too taxing,” Super Relax Concept immediately took to the phones, procuring court reservations, alcohol permits and cocktail recipes, to create the exacting conditions for proper annihilation of their Teams of Portland peers. “Super Relax bocce, the wonderful more than you can believe,” offered Super Relax Team Captain Chris DiStefano.

“Wir zerquetschen Ihre Kugeln” retorted Grundelbruisers representative Geoff Rogers. According to Google translation tools this comment means either “We like ballroom dancing, ja,” or simply “We will crush your balls.”

“We can’t wait, but as it is next month we will have to, declared Van Doores of Hup United, mouthing the obvious, following up with a threat to bring “Euro-pop, frites, mayonnaise, embrocation and rides in Boonen’s cocaine-ed Lamborghini” courtside.

“They’re talking big now,” said the Super Relax Director Sportiff, Holt, “but let’s see how steady they are with a bocce ball in one hand and a glass of Prosecco in the other...heh.”

In addition to following International Bocce Federation rules of play, Teams of Portland rollers must also execute precision rolls with a cocktail in their non-rolling hands or face disqualification. While this event is not OBRA-sanctioned, all winners will be subject to immediate post-game urine testing.

KEEP DREAMIN.’
